4. MELS STUDENT MOBILITY BURSARY PROGRAM— CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY

Purpose:

Through limited funding made available by Quebec's Ministère de l'éducation et de l'enseignement supérieur et de la recherche, qualified students studying outside Quebec as part of their Concordia degree program can apply for a Quebec Mobility Bursary. Although this Bursary is funded by the Ministère, it is administered jointly by Concordia International and the Concordia Financial Aid and Awards Office.

Eligibility:

- Be enrolled in a Concordia University Bachelor's, Master's or PhD degree program (certificate and diploma programs are not eligible) and be in good standing at the University.
- Have completed 24 credits at Concordia towards your current Bachelor's degree program or 9 Concordia credits towards your current Master's or PhD program.
- Participate in a Concordia or independent program of study, internship or research outside Quebec approved for credit towards your Concordia degree on a full-time basis for a minimum of one semester and a maximum of two semesters.
- Have your Faculty's approval to receive credit for your courses, research project, internship or other activity outside Quebec.
- If you are receiving any other scholarships, awards or forms of remuneration (for example, payments, stipends, salaries, etc. for internships, co-op placements or research) for your program outside Quebec, then this amount must be deducted from the amount you are eligible to receive through the Quebec Mobility Bursary.

Possible Award: $1,500 CAD for each full semester (maximum of 2 semesters).

Application Process: <https://www.concordia.ca/students/exchanges/funding/mesrst-bursary.html>

5. MCGILL STUDY ABROAD — MOBILITY AWARD

Purpose:

The purpose of the Mobility Award is to encourage students to study abroad as part of their McGill degree program by defraying part of the cost of the study abroad experience. The award is available to all undergraduate and graduate full-time students enrolled in a degree program at McGill (Quebec, Canadian and International) who have been nominated by McGill to participate in eligible study abroad programs outside Quebec. The Mobility Award enacts the Quebec government's "Programme de bourses pour de courts séjours d'études universitaires" (PBCSE), wherein Quebec-based institutions are free to adopt their own criteria for how the award is to be allocated and disbursed. Consequently, the Mobility Award remains the sole opportunity available to McGill students via the PBCSE process.

The Mobility Award has 2 components:

- The Basic Mobility Award is offered to all McGill students accepted into certain eligible study abroad programs, and
- The Mobility Financial Aid Supplement is available by application to McGill students with financial need who have been accepted into eligible study abroad.

Eligibility:

To qualify and remain eligible for the Mobility Financial Aid Supplement, you must:

- Apply for the Mobility Financial Aid Supplement by completing the Minerva Aid Application within the deadlines published by the Scholarships and Student Aid Office.
- Demonstrate financial need, according to the conditions established by the McGill Scholarships and Student Aid Office. As a general rule, students must apply and be receiving the maximum government aid for which they are eligible.
- Participate in an eligible activity over the minimum of 2 months (61 days).

- Receive a minimum of 6 transfer credits, and at least 3 transfer credits per month abroad, towards your degree program requirements at McGill for the eligible activity.
- Note that if you do not receive the minimum required transfer credits within 4 months after the completion of your activity, you will be required to refund all or part of the award and this amount will be deducted from your student fee account.
- Have completed the required minimum number of McGill credits prior to departure:
 - Undergraduate students must have completed 24 McGill credits.
 - Masters or Ph.D. students must have completed 9 credits of course work (qualifying courses are not eligible) for non-thesis programs and one full-time term for thesis programs at the time of application and not be enrolled in additional session.

Note: Awards received may impact the level of government aid to which you are entitled.

Possible Award: Up to $4,000 CAD per semester (combination of base award and financial aid supplement).
